AH and JD reported a lot of fighting in the relationship, and AH reported physical violence in about half of their fights. She reported his having hit her first, open handed, after he started drinking after six to nine months of being together. She reported always hitting him back as a point of pride but admitted that she eventually initiated the hitting herself. In particular, JD spoke of trying to deescalate their fights by walking away or leaving, as he had learned that that was something he should do.

She reported trying to initiate a fight with him one night, by slapping him, when she was offended by what he said. This did not erupt into a physical fight. However, they had a physical fight the next day, during which he reportedly pulled her hair, kicked her and bruised her face. She had a nurse come to examine her injuries. It was after that that I first heard that AH was considering making charges against him for physical abuse. It was also at this time, I believe, that she showed me photos of her injuries.

I also had some contact with AH, in person and by phone, and she spoke of more fighting and the decision to file against JD. [REDACTED]
